

Biracial

my blood is a battlefield where blue and gray coats clash under star-spangled banners and barred flags

my body is a prison where amber eyes bear witness to war that never ceases seizing minds, wreaking division my being is torn in two by double forces without mercy but my spirit softly whispers there is no war within me